Family Law Section Bulletin - Issue 394, 4 February 2020

Yesterday, Attorney-General David Parker announced the names of five further District Court judges appointed on 21 January, three of which have a Family Court warrant. Two remaining appointees will be named later this year.

Keryn Broughton, barrister of New Plymouth, has been appointed as a District Court Judge with a Family Court warrant and will sit in Palmerston North. Judge Broughton will be sworn in on 24 February in New Plymouth.

Dominic Dravitzki, barrister and solicitor of Christchurch, has been appointed as a District Court Judge with a Family Court warrant and will sit in Timaru. Judge Dravitzki will be sworn in on 2 March in Christchurch.

Kevin Muir, barrister of Auckland, has been appointed as a District Court Judge with a Family Court warrant and will sit in Auckland. Judge Muir will be sworn in on 13 March in Auckland.

Denise Wallwork, barrister of Auckland, has been appointed as a District Court Judge with jury jurisdiction and will sit in the North Shore. Judge Wallwork will be sworn in on 10 March in Manukau.

Peter Winter, barrister of Auckland, has been appointed as a District Court Judge with jury jurisdiction and will sit in Auckland. Judge Winter will be sworn in on 9 March in Auckland.

The FLS warmly congratulate all five judges and wishes them well in their new roles.
